Current Comment

A great many people are trying to account for the defeat, in some states and congressional districts of the sitting senators and representatives, in the various Republican and Democratic primaries. It is difficult to base the reason for these defeates on any one issue, or one set of issues. Some of those who have lost have been defeated by dry and others by wet candidates, so that it cannot all be blamed on the liquor issue. The case of Senator Brookhart of Iowa and Senator Morrison of North Carolina are examples.

Perhaps the best general reason that can be assigned for the various upsets is the depression and the failure of Congress to do anything to end the hard times. Just what Congress could do, of course, is still a matter of debate, although it is generally conceded that a program of general economy and of rapid balancing of the budget would help a great deal to support the constructive measures advocated by the administration and put into law a few months ago. But no matter whether or not he believes that Congress can end the depression, the average man is inclined to lay a part of the blame for present conditions on the failure of Congress to act promptly and effectively. As a result sitting senators and congressmen coming up for renomination, have encountered many casualties in the ranks, although there are of course notable exceptions.

This habit of blaming everything that goes wrong on the "ins" is not totally an American custom. They do it in South America, and Europe, too, and even in the Orient. Recall, for example, the recent revolution in Chile, the overthrow of the government in Japan, the changes in France and Germany, and—to go back a few months—the decisive defeat of the Labor government in Great Britain. Conservative governments have been turned out, in some instances, to make way for radical governments and, in other instances, liberal governments have given way to those with a conservative label. There has been no general pattern of change. It has been in most instances, a turning out of the "ins" and replacing them with the "outs," even though most of the voters must realize if they were to stop and think, that the various governments of the world have had little to do with the great economic depression which was only an inevitable aftermath of the World war.

Some of the American statesmen who have been praising France, during the past year or so for its great thrift, and its business ability, which they claim has softened the effects of the depression in the Latin republic, are now beginning to wonder whether they may not have spoken too soon. Latest word from Paris is to the effect that the government is going to have as tough a time in balancing the budget as did our own Congress. Some figures made public by the French minister of finance are to the effect that there will be a deficit of $160,000,000 at the end of 1932 and plans are already being laid to reduce military expenditures by ten per cent to effect a saving of $60,-

H. M. SHADLE IS HEAD OF HOOVER FOR PRES. CLUB

A Campbell Hoover for President club was organized here Thursday night under the able direction of Dr. David Beattie, district Republican central committee chairman. Dr. Beattie was assisted by H. Irving Lee and Frank Lannin, who conducted a very enthusiastic meeting.

The officers elected were H. M. Shadle, chairman; Dr. W. I. Merrill, vice chairman; G. S. Robson, secretary, and Roy Archibald, treasurer.

C. H. Whitman was chosen as chairman of the campaign committee and H. C. Smith heads the executive committee.

Other members of the club are I. R. Abbott, A. S. Buell, N. O. Best, D. H. Cramer, T. A. Cutting, B. O. Curry, W. R. Coupland, J. E. Fanning, C. B. Field, G. E. Farley, R. H. Hyde, C. L. Johnson, E. R. Kennedy, A. D. Leach, H. W. Morton, M. E. Purmort, E. W. Preston, and T. A. Robinson.

It is true that France was not lavish in lending money to Germany and Austria, as were the American and British bankers, but she has loaned considerable sums to her allies in Central and Eastern Europe. These are political rather than commercial loans. If conditions in Central Europe get much worse, as they show considerable evidence of doing, some of the French allies are going to suffer even more than they are suffering at present, in an economic sense. The French have shown a great deal of satisfaction in the way the world has been withdrawing gold from the United States and other countries and piling it up in Paris. But if the French deficit continues, and conditions get worse in Central Europe the gold may start sliding out of France faster than it was drawn from America.

For the first time since the tariff act was passed before the World War the Democrats in the House of Representatives resorted to the caucus last week to secure a majority for the Garner relief bill. This action thoroughly commits the Democratic party, as it is represented in the House, to the measure which President Hoover called "the most gigantic pork barrel ever proposed to the American Congress—an unexampled raid upon the public treasury." The bill provides for construction of public

S. P. DOLLAR DAYS SET FOR WEEK-END OF 'GLORIOUS 4TH'

With an accommodating calendar placing July 4 on a Monday this year, plans are taking shape for exceptionally heavy excursion travel over the holiday period, it was learned today.

The lowest Independence Day fares ever offered by the Southern Pacific company will be in effect throughout the territory served by the railroad from San Francisco to Salt Lake City and from Portland to El Paso, according to C. T. Tanner, agent for the company here.

In addition, he declared, the travel bargains will provide for trips into Mexico, as far south as the Mexican capital, for tourists from California.

The excursions will be operated over a five-day period, June 30 to July 4, it was stated, with return limit of July 12, except for Mexico trips. Persons traveling to the southern republic will have until July 18 to complete their journeys.

Mr. Tanner also announces that the "Sun-Tan" special stops at Campbell at 9 o'clock Sunday mornings and gets back at 7:15 p. m. The towns served by this train are Santa Cruz, Capitola, Aptos and Watsonville. This service will continue throughout the summer.

Mrs. D. W. Clark entertained a small group of friends Monday at a luncheon at Mrs. Peake's tea room on Winchester road.

Following luncheon auction and contract bridge were played.

An unusual feature of the decorations which elicited many compliments was large bowls of loquot sprays with their ripened fruit.

GRANGE HONORS MEMORY OF F. S. NEWCOMB AT MEET

The Orchard City Grange held a regular meeting last Tuesday evening. The draping of the Grange charter ritual was performed in memory of F. S. Newcomb, whose death occurred between the two meetings of the organization. The ceremony was put on by the Grange chaplain and goddess Ceres, Mrs. Mary Parkhill and Mrs. Marie Hendricks, assisted by the stewards.

Mr. Newcomb had been a Grange member for 26 years, and had been treasurer of this chapter for a number of years. E. K. Clendenning was chosen to fill out the term, and was installed by Past Master W. R. Coupland.

During the lecturer's hour an appropriate Flag day program was presented by Mrs. Jessie McChesney. Five members of the Campbell Boy Scout troop, directed by their scoutmaster, Rev. J. H. Benecett, performed their drill, "Escorting the Flag." Two patriotic songs, "The Story of Old Glory" and "My Own United States" were sung by Mrs. Mildred Silleman. Two readings were given by Mrs. Viola Tolle, and a eulogy to our flag was given by Frank H. Benson of San Jose.

Mrs. P. H. Dunlap and son Robert, and Mrs. Frank Boehme spent several days last week at the Dunlap cotottage in Redwood Estates.

Miss Margaret Blaine is home for the summer after teaching last term at the Soquel school.

Spradling Sees Salvation In Mammoth Prune Pool

Nothing is quite so convincing as experience. This being the case, the following article written by an individual qualified to write on the marketing end of the prune business will be very much in order right now.

L. R. Spradling, whose statement is given below, has had 35 years experience in the marketing of produce and food products wholesale and retail. Most of this time was spent in the middle west. He is at present general manager of the Farmers Union, one of the largest general merchandise stores in San Jose.

"Any plan for prune control," writes Mr. Spradling, "that will accomplish orderly movement to markets and an effective stabilization of prune prices will command invaluable support and assistance from the wholesale grocers all over the east and middle west.

"The increased demoralization in prune prices which has prevailed for a number of years has caused wholesalers to look with disfavor and distrust upon any future commitments on that commodity, and inclined them to utmost caution in making the most meager purchases possible for immediate sales. This has resulted in scant and broken stocks in wholesalers' warehouses and little and unenthusiastic sales effort to move this item.

"The scant stocks and apathetic sales effort on the part of the wholesaler have been reflected in the attitude of retailers throughout the east and middle west toward dried prunes and as a result there has been almost no aggressive sales effort on their part to keep dried prunes before the consumer.

"There was a time not many years ago when wholesale grocery firms in the distributing centers all over the United States were glad to place orders for liberal shipments of California prunes for shipment at firm opening prices and the cash received for such shipments materially helped in financing the grower and the packer. Their salesmen were sent out on an aggressive advance campaign to move dried fruit and retailers bought liberally, made attractive displays and aggressively pushed the sales of dried fruits. Consumers generally reacted promptly to such aggressive sales methods, goods moved rapidly and repeatedly orders were forthcoming and tonnage moved rapidly from producing sections into wholesalers' warehouses in every section.

"A plan of prune control, such as that now presented to California growers will remove the fear and distrust of price wars and unwarranted unfair competitive methods and replace it in the minds of the wholesalers and retailers of the country with confidence in the intgrity, stability, and business methods of the prune industry, would be a most powerful factor in bringing about an increased demand and an increased consumption of prunes in the non-producing sections.

"It would result in placing a considerable part of the load of warehousing and financing upon the wholesalers and retailers of the country from the opening of the season. These increased stocks and resultant financial responsibilities would enlist the aggressive sales efforts of the entire wholesale and retail food industry in the movement of the crop.

"No amount of advertising for the purpose of arousing consumer demand will become effective until wholesalers and retailers are given sufficient confidence in the stability of the prune market to induce them to stock the goods liberally and push sales on them aggressively.

"Given the support nad aggressive sales effort of the wholesale and retail dealers of the country, consumer demand will come easily and prune advertising will bring desired results."

SAVE YOUR MONEY, ADVISES FEDERAL C. S. COMMISSION

Washington, D. C., June 21—The following statement is made by the United States Civil Service commission:

The Commission warns the public against paying money for "coaching" courses in preparation for federal civil service examinations.

Schools which sell such courses under present conditions accept money under false pretenses. A purveyor of civil service courses is now under indictment in Iowa for false representation. It is expected that other such cases of prosecution will follow.

Comparatively few appointments are being made in the federal civil service. Vacancies which must be filled are filled by the transfer of those in the service or in the reinstatement of those who have been in the service, wherever practicable.

It is seldom necessary to announce an examination. In most cases large registers of eligibles exist as a result of examinations held during the past year. When an examination is announced, the applicants are usually hundreds of times in excess of the need.

Money paid for civil service coaching courses at this time might almost as well be thrown to the four winds.

Hoover to Stand on Platform Calling for Modification of 18th Amendment—Would Let States Decide for Themselves.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

LET each state decide for itself whether it will be wet or dry. That, briefly, is the prohibition plank adopted by the Republican national convention in Chicago. It was dictated by President Hoover, and the administration forces, in complete control of the convention, put it over after one of the most uproarious sessions in twenty years of Republican conventions.

President Hoover

The plank is not pleasing to the very wet Republicans and is completely obnoxious to the dry ones. Under the Republican plan congress will at all times be in general control of liquor law enforcement in those states that elect to remain dry. Also, congress will control the manufacture, sale and distribution of liquor within the borders of the wet states.

With the platform out of the way the convention proceeded to do what had been whispered in some quarters they might do. They renominated Herbert Hoover for President and Charles C. Curtis for Vice President.

The debate on the prohibition plank was the only thing that saved this convention from being a complete flop as far as thrills and excitement are concerned. In all other respects it was about as tame as a town meeting, the selection of standard bearers being a foregone conclusion. James R. Garfield, chairman of the resolutions committee, led the fight for the Hoover plank, while Senator Bingham and Nicholas Murray Butler headed the forces demanding a plank insisting on the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment.

Senator Bingham's plank was defeated by a vote of 681 to 472. An analysis of the vote shows that the Republicans in the south swung the balance against the northern, eastern and middle western states which furnish the bulk of the electoral votes for the election of Republican Presidents.

The Hoover plank as adopted reads in part as follows:

"We do not favor a submission limited to the issue of retention or repeal. For the American nation never in its history has gone backward, and in this case the progress which has been thus far made must be preserved, while the evils must be eliminated.

"We, therefore, believe that the people should have an opportunity to pass upon a proposed amendment the provision of which, while retaining the federal government power to preserve the gains already made in dealing with the evils inherent in the liquor traffic, shall allow states to deal with the problem as their citizens may determine, but subject always to the power of the federal government to protect those states where prohibition may exist and safeguard our citizens everywhere from the return of the saloon and its attendant abuses.

"Such an amendment should be promptly submitted to the states by congress, to be acted upon by state conventions called for that sole purpose in accordance with the provisions of Article V of the Constitution, and adequately safeguarded so as to be truly representative."

The entire platform, as submitter by the resolutions committee, was adopted by a viva voce vote. Some of the high lights follow:

Approval given an emergency relief fund for loans to states in need. No direct federal relief to individuals.

Shorter work week, shorter work day, legislation to stimulate home building, continuance of restricted immigration.

Prompt and drastic reduction of public expenditure urged.

Further aid pledged through federal farm board, protective tariff duties, assistance to solve problems of controlling production.

Full protection to incapacitated veterans pledged. Cash payment of bonus not mentioned.

Favor extension of tariff protection to natural resource industries.

Committed to maintenance of navy on basis of parity with any nation. Opposed to further army personnel reduction.

American entry into league court favored. Settlement of international difficulties without "alliances or foreign partnership" pledged.

Rigid laws favored to stamp out activities of gangsters, racketeers and kidnapers.

Relentless warfare pledged against narcotic traffic.

Need cited for revision of banking laws on sounder basis.

Retention of gold standard pledged. Participation in international conferences on monetary questions.

Existing status of government in Hawaii should be maintained.

President's "constructive program" lauded as an attack on the depression with "far-reaching objectives, but entailing no danger to the budget."

Republican control of the federal government will "insure the orderly recovery of the country."

WHILE the Republicans were busy in Chicago, the Democrats made small progress in settling their pre-convention squabbles. One development was the rumor, originating in Chicago, that Melvin A. Traylor, the banker who is one of the dark horse possibilities for the Presidential nomination, might be put on the Roosevelt ticket in second place. It was said the New York governor would welcome this move. The Traylor campaign managers seemed to think the better ticket would be "Traylor and Roosevelt."

Support of the nominee, whoever he may be, was pledged by leaders of the party in a united appeal for completion of the party's $1,500,000 victory fund before the opening of the national convention on June 27. The message to the rank and file was signed by Alfred E. Smith, Gov. Franklin Roosevelt, Jouett Souse, Owen D. Young, Newton D. Baker, former Gov. James M. Cox, John W. Davis, and 54 other leaders.

TRAGEDY stepped in to halt the debate of Representative Wright Patman's soldier bonus bill when Representative E. Eslick (Dem., Tenn.) dropped dead on the floor of the house while making an impassioned plea for the immediate payment of the $2,400,000,000 bonus. Shocked by the dramatic turn of events, the house adourned immediately as a mark of respect.

Wright Patman

Mr. Eslick had about half completed a ten-minute speech in behalf of the bonus. Picturing the World war army as "the flower of the country's manhood," he waved aside questions of finance and said:

"Mr. Speaker, I want to divert from the sordid—"

He never finished the sentence. As he collapsed, he clutched at a table and partially broke his fall. Dr. George W. Calver, Capitol physician, said he had died before he struck the floor. Mrs. Eslick was in the members' gallery at the time.

Tragedy added to futility is the history of this bonus bill. Hours of debate, largely for home consumption, wasted on the measure that was foredoomed before it was presented.

Though it passed the house by a vote of 211 to 176, there was no possible chance that the senate would pass it, and President Hoover had announced that he would veto it if it should be passed.

FRANZ VON PAPEN, Germany's new aristocratic chancellor, held several conferences with the premiers of the states and the German agricultural council and succeeded in part in allaying their fears that his government intended eventually to overthrow the republic. He assured them solemnly that his rule would be "based entirely on the constitution of the reich," and denied that his cabinet was unsocial or reactionary. The dissolution of the reichstag and the calling of elections were thought necessary, he said, to a new unified expression of the national will, and it was his belief "that a new parliament will more readily produce a clear-cut majority for a policy of spiritual and ethical rehabilitation and an economic orientation that shall rest on Christian, national and social foundations."

Franz von Papen

WITHOUT debate the senate adopted a resolution presented by Senator Joe T. Robinson, Democratic floor leader, calling on the President to specify how and where additional savings were to be accomplished. The resolution was introduced in answer to President Hoover's demand that congress save $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 more.

In some quarters the prediction was made that the need for additional budget balancing funds will serve to revive the sales tax, notwithstanding the fact that the billion dollar tax bill already has been enacted into law.

The conference committee, still wrestling with the economy bill, has come to a virtual agreement on the plan for enforced furloughs for federal employees, instead of the 10 per cent pay cut plan.

STANISLAUS FELIX HAUSNER, the aviator, who attempted a flight from New York to Poland, was rescued by the steamship Circle Shell after drifting eight days on the Atlantic on his wrecked airplane. Hausner was completely exhausted when rescued and literally fell into the lifeboat that was lowered to pick him up. The captain of the ship reported by radio that Hausner had received only minor injuries and was progressing satisfactorily.

FOLLOWING the abortive attempt of three young Cubans to assassinate President Machado by throwing a bomb at him, the police of the island republic made a series of raids on the homes of prominent persons and asserted they had uncovered three separate plots against Machado's life. Nearly a hundred leading citizens of Havana were put in prison, and arms and explosives were seized. Capt. Miguel Calvo, chief of the police expert bureau, said: "Cubans have turned to terrorism in a desperate effort to oust President Machado dead or alive. I am convinced that Havana's leading men and women have gone crazy. The revelations are astounding and most disappointing for the future of Cuba and the Cubans."

President Machado

The "society terrorists" belong to the ABC organization which sought to overthrow the government on May 20, independence day, but were foiled by the discovery of their plot. Police say that other government leaders besides Machado are "marked for death."

CARLOS DAVILA apparently was not sufficiently radical in his policies toward foreign interests in Chili, so he was forced by the military and socialistic junta to resign as provisional president. Col. Marmaduke Grove, who had a great deal to do with the ousting of President Montero, remained in control, but there were rumors that an army group was plotting to bring ex-President Carlos Ibanez back from exile and form a new junta with Davila's aid. Capt. Alejandro Lazo, an intimate associate of Davila and of Ibanez, was arrested.

Extremist sentiment against Davila's continuance in the junta arose as a result of attacks against him by the leftist newspaper Opinion, which has led efforts of certain elements in northern Chile to force dissolution of the $375,000,000 Cosach organization.

IT LOOKS as if Gaston B. Means, one of the slipperiest individuals in America, would have to spend another term in a federal penitentiary. A federal jury in Washington found him guilty of stealing $104,000 entrusted to him by Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean for the purpose of ransoming Col. Charles Lindbergh's baby, and the court inflicted a sentence of 15 years' imprisonment and a fine of $2,000. He was acquitted on two embezzlement charges. His attorney moved for a new trial and gave notice of appeal, and meanwhile Means was put back in jail.

Gaston B. Means

POLICE action in the Lindbergh case is being attacked on both sides of the ocean, following the suicide of Violet Sharpe, English maid in the service of the Morrow family. The young woman had been questioned repeatedly by the police, and many persons in America and in England believe she had so persecuted that she was driven to self-destruction, although it appears she was in no way implicated in the kidnaping. State Senator E. L. Richards of New Jersey attacked the administration of Governor Moore as responsible for blunders in the case and said a legislative investigation was "virtually certain."

In London a member of the house of commons brought up the matter by asking the foreign office if the government had its attention called to the suicide of Miss Sharpe and if it would make representations to the Washington government suggesting an inquiry as to what responsibility the police had for the girl's death.

Homicidal Maniacs

The horrible story of the asylum attendant who died as the result of a struggle with a maniac, recalls another ghastly story which an alienist related some time ago. An attendant in an asylum observed a patient wandering down the ward carrying a human head under his arm. He thought tact was called for, and asked the lunatic politely whose head he had got and why. As if it was the most natural thing in the world, the other gave him the information he asked for and said he decapitated his unfortunate fellow patient in his sleep because he thought it would be so amusing to see him looking for his head when he woke up.—Exchange.

Peaceful Holland

It has been said of the Dutch that they "smoke like a chimney." Illustrative of their love of the serene weed is the will of old Heer van Klass of Rotterdam. He died at ninety-eight years with his pipe in his mouth, having smoked nearly five ounces of tobacco a day. Every smoker who went to his funeral received ten pounds of tobacco and two pipes, and a package of tobacco is sent each year on his anniversary to the poor who attended. All the mourners smoked and shook out the ashes of their pipes on the coffin which was lined with the wood of his old Havana cigar boxes and matches, for, as he added, "One never knows what may happen."

Punch and Judy Origin

The Punch and Judy show, after all the years it has been performed, still holds its lure for children. The trials and tribulations of Punch, which once were one of the features of every carnival and circus sideshow, are generally attributed to the invention of an Italian comedian who was at the height of his popularity around 1600. The "company" performing Punch and Judy is composed of only two persons together with their doll characters.

Gas in Trees

The presence of inflammable gas in trees is not infrequently noted by foresters making timber growth studies in some of our southern states, says R. R. Reynolds of the United States forest service. At times it is present in such quantities that the use of an increment borer on the trees will result in an explosion that resembles the crack of an air rifle and a lighted match applied to the handle of the borer will cause the gas to ignite and burn for a number of seconds, he says.

Timely Thought

There are no profit and loss columns in the ledger of generosity. He who gives in the expectation of getting something in return is not a giver, but a merchant. He who gives with no such expectation, merely to plant a seed where it may or may not grow; to start a series of kindly relationships which may or may not continue to infirmity, is in the highest sense a sportsman. And there is no sport on earth that compares with this.—Boston Transcript.

Encouraging the Teacher

The first-grade teacher was trying to instruct one of the "yearlings" in the application of colored crayon to some pictures at hand. The teacher took the crayons and demonstrated the strokes, explaining why she chose blue here, and green there.

Jean, the little girl being thus instructed, thought the teacher deserved encouragement, so she blushed at the thought of her efforts and burst out:

"You know, teacher, I think you're mighty good on taste."

THE FARMERS CORNER

By Ralph H. Taylor

Hard times have one distinct advantage, at least, in that they often expose false values which have obtained in times of prosperity and place true emphasis on fundamentals.

During the present economic upheaval, for instance, California business leaders have acquired a new and healthy respect for California farmers—a respect born of the realization that the state's basic wealth still comes from the soil.

Agriculture, in many instances, has evidenced better ability to adjust itself to radically changed conditions than business and industry.

And farm trade, for the most part, has held up better than city trade—a condition which has won lively appreciation in the business world.

Closely following the disclosure, in a recent business survey, that California farmers spend more than $300,000,000 annually with state merchants, the United States census bureau has given new emphasis to the importance of farm trade with the release of a report showing that retail trade, during 1930, was almost uniformly better in the states rural communities than in the great centers of population.

In the list of 25 California cities with the heaviest per capita retail sales, 13 farm cities reported heavier trade, proportionately, than San Francisco, while 17 rural cities bested Los Angeles in per capita trading and 20 surpassed Oakland.

Modesto, the banner farm city in retail trade, reported sales of $1,373.36 per inhabitant, or $586.69 more than the per capita sales in San Francisco, the leader in the metropolitan group.

Giving evidence of the impression made on the banking world by the Census bureau's trade analysis, the Bank of America published the list of 25 cities in its Business Review, with their relative standing, and frankly commented: "The heaviest sales are in those cities which are the principal trading centers of the rich agricultural valley."

The leading farm cities in retail trade, in the order of their rating, were listed by the Census bureau as follows:

	Per Capita Sales
Modesto	$1,373.36
Santa Rosa	1,368.94
Ventura	1,131.60
Salinas	1,085.45
Fresno	1,009.46

Where Nerve Is Needed

To cross the Jhelum river in India by means of its restless, rawhide rope bridge, is a nerve-wracking experience for novices. In remote sections of China there are similar rope bridges that are worked on a different principle. In these Chinese bridges there are two ropes of twisted vegetable fiber, one slanting down from an elevation at one side of the river to the water's edge on the other side, and the other slanting down in the opposite direction. The Chinese simply fasten a wooden sliding block on to the rope, and—zip—they are on the other side of the river.

works which are not needed by the Government for the erection of public buildings even over the protest of the communities in which they are to be constructed, and in general for a reckless and improvident misuse of public money. A similar measure of Democratic origin, is pending in the Senate. Both of these bills call for enormous bond issues and are based upon the falacy that the United States can better its condition by saddling further debts upon its already overburdened people. Enactment of either of these bills would compel Congress to increase taxes above the extremely high level already provided for in the revenue bill that has just been framed. Neither bill would provide work for enough men to make an appreciable dent in the unemployment situation, while both would divert capital from possible useful investment into tax free government securities.

Against the plan underlying both these bond raids the President stands resolutely opposed. He offers a program of public relief which avoids the economic blunder of reckless indebtedness and the political crime of pork barrel raids upon the treasury. His plan will give immediate relief to states and communities both by loans to alleviate unemployment and by immense contributions from the Finance Relief corporation to projects which will pay their own way and thereby avert the calamity of increased debt and taxation.

The contrast between the Democratic idea and the presidential plan is clear and distinct, and certainly the peoople will have no difficulty in passing judgment. The Democratic plan does not have the support of a single sound economist, while the President's proposals commend themselves to everybody's common sense.
